Ref: W01004B-03-0722 - Ltr s/Kempley advocating on behalf of Commissioner
Jeff Hatch-Miller re Ash Fork Water.

Dear Sir:

Regarding the above referenced correspondence purportedly docketed for the record in this case by you on 09 Jun 2004, this Intervenor cannot help but wonder if, prior to his political demise, former commissioner Jim Irvin might not also have received similar advice?

The Ash Fork Water controversy commenced in 2002 after this Intervenor discovered an Arizona Corporation Commission attempt to cover up overreaching ultra vires acts performed by the utility under erroneous claim of municipal sovereignty. From the beginning, the Intervenor has made it unquestionably clear that he was informed and believes that considerable fraud, conspiracy and deceit — including, but not limited to suspected political pandering, insider trading of federal government grant-in-aid information, bid rigging, collusion, bureaucratic syndicalism and obstruction of justice — has allegedly occurred in the three<sup>1</sup> bifurcated Ash Fork Water matters. Accordingly, in this Intervenor's interpretation, the purpose of third-party intervention was, is and remains intended to enable the production of credible evidence sufficient to determine who knew what when so as to allow the Intervenor to raise issues necessary for investigation and resolution of the case by the regulatory authority. Any conflict of interest is wholly, one hundred percent unacceptable. Because the Intervenor has consistently encountered obstructionist behavior in the form of an on-going gargantuan cover-up originating from within the regulatory authority itself, it has been concluded that the Arizona Corporation Commission is a corrupt government agency clearly out of control which has refused or otherwise failed to investigate suspected wrongdoing, thus failing miserably in it's mandate to protect the Ash Fork area consumer public.

Bottom line: No matter what his political or occupational status may be, Arizona Corporation Commission commissioner Jeff Hatch-Miller is not entitled to preferential treatment. In fact, the said commissioner is duty-bound to respond to inquiries from his constituency. Based on the obstructionist nature of the above referenced correspondence, relief will be sought elsewhere.

Thank you for your interest.
